1.4 Key Findings

Total revenue has increased significantly from 2024 to 2025.

The revenue share between the top 10 games in 2024 and 2025 went from 20.58% to 18.45%. therefore, the increase in revenue generated by games outside the top ten suggests there is a wider range of consumer spending within the Steam market.

The data indicates that while the main games franchises remain the important revenue drivers, however, Steam did become less dependent on a small number of top-performing games in 2025.

2 Analysis of Positively Reviewed Games

The purpose of this analysis is to provide an insight into player satisfaction and if they are likely to purchase the next game or even predecessors in the franchise.

2.1 Most Positively Reviewed Games in 2024

Figure 3 shows that the most positively reviewed game was Counter Strike 2, receiving approximately 7 million positive reviews, which has significantly exceeded all the other titles in 2024. Overall, demonstrating the fact that Counter Strike 2 received an exceptional level of satisfaction whereby almost receiving 4 times the positive review total, compared to the second placed game.

2.3 Key Findings

Counter Strike 2 was the strongest game in 2024 by far.

Terraria was the most positively reviewed game in 2025, however, only by a small margin. Therefore, showing that the 2025 rankings present more diversity in preferences across multiple games.

3 Analysis of Overall Reviews

3.1 Most Reviewed Games in 2024

Figure 5 shows that the most reviewed game was Counter Strike 2 with roughly 8.1 million reviews. Counter Strike 2 had a lot more engagement compared to its competitors showing dominance in the market with over 3 times the number of total reviews compared to the second placed game.

4 Conclusions

The Steam marketplace demonstrated strong growth between 2024 and 2025, with total revenue increasing from £2.04 billion to £2.44 billion. Despite this growth, the share revenue amongst the top 10 best-selling games decreased, suggesting less dependency on the top 10 best sellers and now distributing more revenue with other games, making for healthier competition.

User engagement trends also considerably changed. In 2024, Counter Strike 2 dominated positive reviews and total reviews, highlighting player satisfaction and popularity. However, 2025 shows a different story where although Terraria received most positive reviews and total reviews, it was not through dominance whereby games such as Rainbow Six Siege, Garry's Mod, Rust, and Black Myth: Wukong also being in the mix for top contention.

Overall, the evidence suggests that Steam has grown, became more profitable, and has more diversity in 2025. Revenue was less focused with the highest selling games, also providing player engagement being distributed across a range of successful titles, showing that there is more competition in the gaming marketplace.
